Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 23 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain and strong winds moving east, else sunshine and showers.

Today:
Many places starting dry with sunny spells, but a scattering of showers developing, before a band of rain, some heavy, and strong winds moves east across western and later central areas. This followed by heavy showers across Northern Ireland.

Tonight:
Rain, some heavy, clearing east across England, but becoming slow moving across central and then northern Scotland. Clear spells developing, but heavy showers following across Wales and southwest England.

Monday:
Cold, wet and windy across northern Scotland. Sunny spells and heavy showers elsewhere, frequent England and Wales with risk of hail and thunder. Driest for Northern Ireland and southern Scotland.

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Showers or longer spells of rain Tuesday and Wednesday for many areas. Western areas always drier, with these settled conditions developing more widely by Thursday. Temperatures recovering closer to normal.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.